PEORIA COPS
ACCUSED IN
AUTO THEFTSChief of Police Given Suspension; Drove
a "Hot Car"

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Chief of police J. Shirley West and Detective Richard Claudine were today temporarily suspended by Mayor Louis Mueller as a result of charges made by Sergeant Frank McDonald of the Chicago Automobile Detective bureau that the officers were driving an automobile which had been stolen off the streets of Chicago. The announcement of the suspension followed a call for a showdown this morning, the mayor requesting that McDonald, the officers, and Floyd Overby, Chicago, held as the ring leader of the "hot" car ring, meet with him in his office.

Overby's attorney informed the mayor that Overby could not be present and McDonald said he would not submit to a cross-examination at such a hearing. The mayor then announced that as he could not learn the truth about the charges he would temporarily suspend the two officials. William Kunst, a veteran detective, was named chief of police temporarily.

Chief Surrendered Auto
A Chrysler roadster was surrendered last week when he was shown that it was stolen from a Chicagoan. He is said to have purchased the car from Overby last June and obtained a license for it in his own name. McDonald, on returning to Chicago, made the statement that the chief had refused to cooperate in uncovering the automobile ring. This the chief denies. Claudine, a veteran detective on the force says he has not yet been shown that the car which he purchased from Overby is "hot" and he still has possession of it. McDonald was quoted as saying in Chicago that the detective had surrendered the car.

Jesse D. Weast, assistant state's attorney, also named by McDonald as having a "hot" car in his possession denies it has been identified as a stolen car.

Atty. Has Bill of Sale
He has a bill of sale showing that he bought the car from the Komers Mortar Company of East Peoria, and he claims the officers are accusing him on suspicion that the company was a "hot car distributing plant." Investigation shows that the Chicagoan from whom the car was alleged stolen had not even lost his automobile, he says.

McDonald who was assisted by a state highway officer claims there are more than 800 "hot" cars in Peoria and central Illinois as the result of the operations of a ring which had its headquarters in Chicago. Eleven of the cars are said to have been recovered.

A hearing in justice court was to be held today on two writs of replevin by which Overby seeks to have two automobiles seized by the state investigators for identification returned to him. Later in the same court he will answer to two warrants charging him with possessing cars having mutilated engine numbers. Up to the time of the hearing by the (Continued on Page 2)

DIXON AUTOIST, CHASED FOR SPEEDING IN STERLING, MADE
ESCAPE THROUGH FUSILLADELaVerne Roger's Car
Hit Four Times by Sterling Officer

Police officers of Dixon and Sterling were searching today for LaVerne Rogers of this city, who is wanted in both cities on charges of speeding following a wild ride through the streets of Sterling last night during which Motorcycle Officer Gooding of the Sterling police department followed the Rogers car, a Dodge special touring, through the west end of Sterling to the village of Galt and fired several shots into the machine in an effort to stop the speeder, who was reported to be driving at a rate of between 70 and 80 miles.

Gooding is said to have stopped Rogers on West Fourth street in Sterling last evening for speeding, and to have driven his motorcycle to the curb to dismount. The engine of the motorcycle "died" and as the officer approached the automobile, the driver stepped on the gas and sped westward on the Lincoln Highway. Starting his machine again the officer gave chase, following the speeding machine into the village of Galt, where Rogers is said to have driven into a blind street, raising a heavy cloud of dust. The officer had fired shots at the speeding car as it left Sterling and four of these evidently struck the target, two being dangerously close to the driver's head.

Retraced His Route
The driver of the speeding car, turned his machine and headed back for Sterling as two more shots were fired at the car. He is said to have tried to run into the motorcycle officer as he passed him returning to Sterling. Efforts to stop him in Sterling were fruitless and the Dixon police were notified.

Chief Van Bibber and another officer went to Swissville, it was reported, to stop the machine as it entered the city, but they were unsuccessful. As the car approached the city, the driver recognized the police machine and increased his speed, according to reports, giving the two local officers a chase through northside residential streets, and finally evaded them. The police then went to the Rogers home to await the return of the car and its party and found the machine parked. As the police car approached, Rogers is said to have jerked the key out of the switch, and he and his companions darted through an alley and made their escape.

Motorcycle Officer Gooding came to Dixon this morning with a warrant charging Rogers with speeding and reckless driving, and his arrest is expected soon.

Car Hit Four Times
The car showed that four of the shots fired by the motorcycle officer, driving at the high rate of speed, found their mark. One had struck the front of the car above the windshield, and another passed through the top. Both of these were believed to have been fired from the front as the car turned back east in Galt. Two more holes in the car were thought to have been made as the car sped west out of Sterling.

Chief of Police J. D. Van Bibber at noon today was in possession of all of the names of the parties who occupied the car, there being five young men, all of this city. One of the bullets from the motorcycle officer's gun grazed the shoulder of one of the passengers in the rear seat. It was reported the car was towed to the police station early this morning and later turned over to the owner.

Lex Hartzell made a business trip to Sterling yesterday.

VALENTINO RESTS
WELL; NO CAUSE
FOR UNDUE FEARFilm Star's Suite Not Large Enough for Many Flowers

New York, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Although visitors were still refused permission to see Rudolph Valentino today, the screen star's condition was said in an official bulletin by his physician not to be such as to cause undue anxiety.

He underwent a double operation for appendicitis and gastric ulcers at Polyclinic hospital Sunday night. It was reported that he was suffering from local peritonitis, which had already reached a serious stage, but no mention of this complication was contained in the bulletin today.

It was signed by three doctors and read:

Morning Bulletin
"Mr. Valentino passed a fairly comfortable night. There is no change to cause undue anxiety. Temperature, 101½; pulse 100, respiration 22."

Joseph Schenck, producer of Valentino's pictures, and his wife, Norma Talmadge, called at the hospital but were told that it was inadvisable to admit visitors as yet.

Valentino has the most expensive and largest suite in the hospital but there was not enough room for all the flowers sent by admirers. The hospital telephone switchboard was swamped with inquiries. A special waiting room was set aside for callers.

Got Many Telegrams
Among telegrams of sympathy was one from Jack Dempsey and his wife, Estelle Taylor of screenland. Pola Negri, who announced recently that she was engaged to Valentino on trial, said in Los Angeles that she would take the first train to New York to see him after she finished the picture on which she is working.

Valentino has asked several times about Miss Negri.

A report that Valentino's first wife, Jean Acker, has called at the hospital is denied by his manager.

While no official bulletins will be issued on Valentino's condition until later today, it was said at the hospital that he had slept soundly throughout the night.

Manager of Local Store

GOVT. IS WITHOUT POWER TO INTER-
VENE IN MEXICOSituation in Mexico is Purely Domestic Matter, Statement

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 17.—(AP)—While the petition of the Knights of Columbus asking that the United States intervene in Mexico to protect Catholic church men in their religious dispute with President Calles was not referred to directly, it was reiterated today at the summer executive offices in behalf of President Coolidge that the Washington government has no authority under diplomatic usage, international law or treaty rights to interfere in the purely domestic affairs of Mexico.

Arrests in Mexico City
Mexico City, Mex., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Fifty persons have been taken into custody in the federal district charged with having participated in a plot of wide ramifications for uprisings last Sunday against the government's religious regulations.

Additional arrests have been made at other places. These include a general of the federal army, whose name is withheld. All members of the city council of the town of Amecameca were arrested. Eight persons arrested in Mexico City were released.

There are some suggestions in unofficial circles that the concentration of forces of General Estrada near the Mexican border in California may have been connected with the plot.

Church Uninformed
The Catholic episcopate, when informed of the police reports that Catholics had been taken by the police in connection with the alleged conspiracy, said it was known that a number of Catholic leaders had been arrested but it was understood the police were searching their homes for missing church treasures.

It was stated that the episcopate had no information of any uprising having been planned by Catholics. It was pointed out church authorities announced on several occasions the attitude of the church was peaceful.

It is said by police that in some Catholic homes were found dynamite rifles and documentary evidence showing that an uprising had been planned.

Police assert that uprisings were planned in the states of Chihuahua, Jalisco, Puebla, Morelos and Michoacan and in Mexico City.

No further disturbance has been reported since the fight between police and Catholics Sunday at San Angel, in which numerous heads were broken.

Trial for Murder of His Daughter Today

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 17.—(AP)—With Wallace Gaines due to testify today in his trial on a charge that he killed his daughter, Sylvia when she tried to terminate an unnatural relationship between them, it was indicated that the case would go to the jury this week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gaines, the defendant's second wife, maintained her husband's innocence through two hours of cross-questioning by the state. She told of events preceding the finding of the denuded body of the 22 year old Smith college graduate on the night of June 16 on a lake shore where the girl had been choked and beaten to death.

In answering testimony by witnesses that Gaines and his daughter had occupied a suite in a hotel here, Mrs. Gaines declared she remained in the suite in question but that Sylvia was talking of her father "after he had been drinking."

THIS WAS DENIAL
DAY AT COOLIDGE
SUMMER OFFICESMany Reports Declared by President to be News to Him

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 17.—(AP)—This was denial day at the summer whitehouse.

In behalf of President Coolidge, a number of reports which have appeared in the public prints from time to time, were dismissed with the word that in reading the newspapers Mr. Coolidge had received his first word of a number of contemplated moves attributed to him.

A published report that bankers at the instance of the President were planning a $100,000,000 pool for loan purposes to farm property was said to be incorrect. The President, it was emphasized, has no knowledge of any such plan.

Another denial was made of a report that Mr. Coolidge had issued orders to the prohibition enforcement unit in Washington against adopting a plan to put poisons in alcohol intended for non-beverage use.

When the President read of this in some newspapers it was said it was the first he had heard of it. As a matter of fact it was added, he happened to know only in a most general way of his legal powers in any such matter.

Some reports that the President was informed of a farm conference that might be held in New York soon between prominent financiers and farmers representatives to devise aids for the agricultural industry also were said to be news to him.

Louis Mazer Surprised
Into Talking When
He is Accused

Cleveland, O., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Louis Mazer, accused in the presence of his aged parents of having murdered Don R. Mellett, vice crusading publisher of the Canton Daily News, collapsed today and it was reported "he was telling all" to United States District Attorney A. E. Bernstein.

The accusation that brought collapse to the prisoner was the first time that Mazer was directly told he was wanted for the slaying. It came to him from the district attorney.

Mazer was agitated when he faced his accusers. His appearance led observers to believe him a narcotic user, but this belief was flatly denounced by Joseph Roach, Chicago, who has directed the investigation.

Until State's Attorney Bernstein gave voice to the charge against him, Mazer had been kept in ignorance of the real cause for his arrest.

After the breakdown before the direct accusation by District Attorney A. E. Bernstein, Mazer denied any knowledge of the crime.

"It's a lie. I did not do it," Mazer shouted. Carl Studer alleged confederate of Mazer in various illicit traffickings was brought before the accused man. Mazer was startled to see Studer. He did not know Studer was being detained.

MEET DEATH
MONDAY EVE
AT WAUKESHAMr. and Mrs. Robert Aldrich Victims of Tragic Mishap

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Aldrich of Huntley, Ill., former residents of Dixon, where Mr. Aldrich, then a representative of a tea and coffee concern, met and wed his wife, who was Miss Avis Martin, daughter of Howard Martin, at that time a resident of Gap Grove, met instant death late Monday night near Waukesha, Wis., when their automobile was struck by an electric train on the Milwaukee-Watertown railroad.

The tragedy occurred on a crossing west of Waukesha, when the rapid transit train, laden with summer resorters bound for Milwaukee and roaring down the track at a speed of a mile a minute, crashed into the small coupe in which the victims were riding, hurling it over fifty feet ahead and to one side of the speeding train.

Dead When Picked Up
Both were dead when trainmen reached them after stopping and backing up the train and identification was made possible by cards in Aldrich's pocket and by the register of a Waukesha hotel, where they had been staying. Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich had been there several days, preparing to launch a selling campaign for the Citizens' Wholesale Supply Co. of Columbus, Ohio, by whom they were employed.

The road at the crossing intersects the railroad track diagonally, obscuring the view of trainmen and of drivers of the highway. Waukesha county authorities and officials of the traction company today began an investigation into the tragedy, while the bodies of the victims were taken to Huntley.

Rockford—Earl Deer, 44, of Millidgeville, Ill., who thought he had a pain Sunday night and needed a surgical operation, went to the Rockford city hospital for treatment. He was admitted to the hospital for an examination.

A short time after Deer was admitted, it is said, he sampled a bottle of alcohol rub which a nurse had inadvertently left in the hospital ward. Deer liked the taste of the bton so well that he drained the bottle.

In a short time Deer was intoxicated, it is reported, and created a rumpus at the hospital by his antics. The sheriff's office was notified and deputy sheriffs responded to the call and arrested Deer.

Deer was arraigned before Justice E. V. Rohlen where he was fined $

Mrs. Sarah Rich Celebrated Birthday

Mrs. Sarah Rich celebrated her eightieth birthday Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Stevens of East Fourth street, Sterling. The day was observed by a family reunion, the first time for nineteen years that the family had all been together and this made it a very happy occasion.

An elaborate birthday dinner was served at noon, including a birthday cake. Mrs. Rich received a great many flowers, gifts and greeting cards from her host of friends. During the afternoon she received a number of friends. A group picture was taken of the happy family.

Her children present were John of Chicago, Henry of St. Louis, Reuben of Sterling, Mrs. W. N. Andrews of Dixon, Dr. Albert of Jacksonville, Ill., and Mrs. E. L. Stevens of Sterling.

Mrs. Rich has spent the greater part of her life in the country, having been born and raised on a farm just east of Sterling, which her father homesteaded. Her many friends wish her many more happy birthdays.

HALTING THE BLOODY HAND.

A score of systematically planned, ruthless murders; millions of dollars at stake; a revival of the ancient hatred for the white men—those are the elements that are furnishing a very real drama in Oklahoma now.

For years, the Osage territory has lived in terror of the curse brought upon it by the "black gold" which flows from the oil wells. An Indian woman died, poisoned. A daughter followed her after a mysterious illness. Another daughter was murdered by dynamite. A brave was found stabbed to death in a ravine.

So went the hand of death, directed by no one knew whom. But each time the hand struck it killed a rich man. His headrights went to his descendants, who, in turn, also were murdered. Gradually the Osage wealth was passing into the hands of a few. Where would it end?

Murmurs rose against the white men; their investigations accomplished nothing; their law was "bad medicine." Every pale face in the territory was the object of suspicion. The murders went on.

Then the "great white father" in Washington sent many of the "governments" to break the curse. Subsequent trials, confessions and sentences show that it has been done. The Indians are "free" again.

JONES, THE SPORTSMAN.

Bobby Jones, the golfer, has a great many admirable qualities and not the last among them is his firm refusal to let any of his exploits turn his head.

As the greatest golfer in the world—further, as the most colorful, probably, of all sports figures—he has been besieged on all sides with requests to write autobiographies, to "cover" golf tournaments for newspapers, to sell his signature for a handsome sum that others might write under it.

But to all of this he has turned a deaf ear. He has played the game for the game's sake. He is undoubtedly the most genuine amateur, in the true sense of the word, of any of our sport celebrities.

But the other day Bobby turned writer. It seems that O. B. Keeler, sports writer for the Atlanta Journal, who has followed Bobby's career for 15 years, entered the Atlanta newspaper men's tournament, and Bobby, in the role of reporter, wrote the story of O. B.'s round for the Journal.

Keeler has chronicled every shot Bobby has made through 15 tournaments. He started writing about Bobby when the latter was a rosy-cheeked lad of nine.

It was just a little thing that Bobby did—to write up his friend's golf game. But it was a mighty pretty thing, and thoughtful. Bobby is a real sport, and a loyal one.

Quaker Oats
"stands by"
you through the morning

That's why millions start their days in this way

TO feel right through the morning, you must have well-balanced, complete food at breakfast. At most other meals—that is, at luncheon and at dinner—you usually get that kind of food.

But at breakfast the great dietary mistake is most often made—a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamins and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Food that should start every breakfast in your home.

Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

Her Own Way.
A STORY OF
A GIRL OF TODAY

A QUEER COINCIDENCE

It was a strange ride back to the city. Joan had left her town car at the hotel and we were going to drop her there. Jerry did not speak at all. He seemed perfectly engrossed in his thoughts, and by his face I knew that they were not pleasant. And I—well, I was trying to make myself think that I loved Jerry—I was telling myself that surely no girl ever had a more splendid, devoted sweetheart.

I think we were all glad when we arrived at the Blackstone. Joan started to get out of the car quickly, but I held her back a moment to say, "Before you go out to your house tonight, be sure that you phone to Mr. Elkins to make an appointment to meet him tomorrow morning."

"What if he will not see me?" she asked. She had always had these engagements made for her and I felt that she would not know what to do if he refused to see her.

I, too, got out of the car, and told Jerry that I would go in and help Joan make her engagement.

Jerry followed me rather reluctantly. He didn't relish the idea of standing in a telephone booth consuming the time that he might have spent with the girl he was fond of.

He called up Mr. Elkins' home, however, and was told that Mr. Elkins, Sr., would talk to no one, because he was quite ill.

"Will you please let someone come to the phone that I can talk with," said Jerry impatiently.

I took the receiver from him. I saw he was too unhappy to be polite.

"I would like to talk to Mr. Elkins," I said.

"Which Mr. Elkins?" Interrupted an impatient voice.

"Joan," I whispered excitedly, my hand over the mouthpiece of the phone. "I am sure that it was your stepfather that answered this time."

"Nonsense," broke in Jerry. "Even if Mr. Robinson was there in the room with Mr. Elkins, he wouldn't be answering the phone. It was probably Mr. Elkins' man or the butler."

"I tell you I am sure that it was Mr. Robinson," I reiterated. "I would know his voice anywhere especially when it is as excited as it is tonight."

"Here, let me take the receiver," commanded Joan quickly.

Evidently the same man answered, for Joan spoke, "Is that you, Dad?" She smiled and said, "Don't swear, Dad. It is not polite." I could well understand the conflagration that was going on at the other end of the wire.

After a moment's listening, Joan continued, "Well, the reason I called up was that I wanted to be sure that Mr. Elkins would be ready to turn over Bud's and my property day after tomorrow."

Again she listened.

COURT ACTION IS LIKELY IN HEAVY WEIGHTS' FIASCO

Mandamus Sought to Compel Issue of License to Champion

New York, Aug. 17—(AP)—Litigation is now in prospect in order that Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney may fight. Mandamus proceedings are contemplated to compel the issuance of a license for Dempsey to box in this state and Tex Rickard says he will hold the fight nowhere else.

The state license committee refused yesterday to grant Dempsey a license until he signed to meet Harry Wills before facing any other opponent.

State Attorney General Ottinger said the license committee went beyond its power. The committee is a branch of the state athletic commission.

"I am disappointed," Rickard said, "but I have the approval of the state athletic commission which rules such matter and I am going ahead with my plans."

George E. Brower, member of the commission, whose recent change of heart called Rickard back from Chicago to stage the contest at the Yankee stadium, said that the commission had done its best in the public interest.

As the license committee acted unfavorably, Dempsey's former manager, Jack Kearns, filed suit against him for $333,333.33.

SIDELIGHTS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Browns made a strong finish in the first game against the Red Sox by pounding Wiltse hard and then continuing the hammering of Welzer while Van Gilder was holding the Red Sox to three hits.

Rigney of the Red Sox couldn't get a hit off Van Gilder in the first game of the twin bill with the Browns but made up for it in the aftermath by turning in a perfect average with two doubles and a single off Gaston.

Hack Wilson of the Cubs cracked out two homers and Heathcote one against the Cardinals but the Hornsby clan won.

Jim Bottomley poked out the single in the ninth frame with the bases loaded which enabled the Cardinals to defeat the Cubs.

Roy Meeker, Portland Pacific Coast league pitcher, is expected to report to the Cincinnati Reds in a few days. He was purchased along with the infielder, Prothro, who will

Pyle Has Ambitious Plans for Suzaone

New York, Aug. 17—(AP)—Mme. Suzanne Lenglen will be supported by nine capable tennis players in her professional tour of North America starting in September according to her manager, C. C. Pyle. Pyle will build his own courts.

This was made known by the manager upon his arrival from France yesterday.

While in Europe Pyle also made tentative arrangements for Red Grange and George Wilson, all American backs, to take teams across the Atlantic for exhibition games.

ASHTON STAGED RALLY TO BEAT ROCHELLE STARS

Pick of League Teams of Ogle Co. City
Given Beating

The Ashton Cubs staged a ninth inning rally Saturday to win one of the most exciting games of the season from the pick of Rochelle's league teams. Ashton played loose ball at first with numerous errors, but tightened up to play real ball at the finish. Smith of Kings pitched a nice game for Rochelle but was touched for ten hits while Moore yielded but five. Ashton first broke into the scoring column in the seventh when Krug doubled and came home on Moore's hit through Condon. The winning runs were pushed over in the ninth when Miller walked, Johnson singled and Krug hit through short scoring Miller. Vaupel then laid down a pretty bunt to advance

Johnson to third. Myers also bunted safely down first base line to score Johnson. It was a nice exhibition of baseball. Mt. Morris will cross bats with Ashton next Saturday, this game being one of the most interesting of the season.

Helen's Eyeshades There; She is Not

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 17—(AP)—Half a dozen or more Helen Willis eyeshades are being worn by contestants for the national women's tennis championship but no Helen Willis is here.

The champion, whose health has compelled her to relinquish the crown she has held since 1923, was speeding back to California while the 58 claimants of her crown dodged rain drops in the first round of the annual tournament.

All seeded players won easily. Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, Miss Mary Browne, Mrs. Charlotte H. Chapin and Miss Eleanor Goss were among those advancing. Miss Elizabeth Ryland had no first round match.

HUGGINS THINKS HIS TEAM FACES HARD SITUATION

Just Think; the Yanks Must Win Half of Games to Beat

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
M. Huggins, little manager of the New York Yanks, feels that he has a big job in front of him despite his team's long lead in the American league.

"We must win half our remaining 36 games to be safe," he argues "and the way we went last week even that is going to be hard."

Chicago and Detroit set up a record for the season yesterday when they went ten innings without a score and then had to run for trains. Sunday they played five scoreless frames. In the two days the Tigers made five hits off Lyons and Edwards while the White Sox registered four off Gibson and Collins.

Triples by Haney and Gaston gave the Red Sox a 7 to 1 victory over St. Louis in the second game of a double header after the Bostonians had been outslugged for a 6 to 1 beating in the first game.

The St. Louis Cardinals gained a half game on Pittsburgh by beating Chicago 5 to 4 in a ninth inning rally.

Contractor Wants to Quit Air Mail Service

Chicago, Aug. 16—(AP)—Air mail service from Chicago to St. Paul inaugurated more than two months ago by Charles Dickinson, was halted today while Dickinson asked the government to allow immediate cancellation of his contract.

The contract awarded to him specifies that 45 days notice of cancellation must be given and Dickinson told Superintendent A. L. Ruden of the air mail field that if immediate cancellation is refused he will operate for 45 days more in order to obtain return of bond he posted when the service was undertaken early in June.

CRITICISM OF TRUDY EDERLE GETS ANSWER

Charge of Tugs Aiding
Her Ridiculed by Best Swimmers

New York, Aug. 17—(AP)—European criticism that Gertrude Ederle was enabled to her channel swim by accompanying tugs has aroused an answering storm of protest from American admirers.

"If there is a tug afloat that can appreciably diminish the channel seas or cause the tide to cease running, we have never heard of it," says the New York World today.

Commenting on the accusation that Miss Ederle was so close to one tug that she was drawn along by suction, the World remarks, "no boat making two knots an hour so as to keep pace with a swimmer would cause 'suction' enough to worry about, if any. Miss Ederle got there because she had two things, muscle and brains."

Aspersions were attributed to jealousy by Miss Charlotte Epstein, former professional of the Women's Swimming association of Washington.

F. Handley, swimming expert said: "It is ridiculous to assume that any tug can stem the tide."

Storm Forced Lillian Cannon from Channel

Cape Gris-Nez, France, Aug. 17—(AP)—Miss Lillian Cannon of Baltimore, failed this morning in her first attempt to swim the English channel. A sudden storm forced her to quit after swimming two hours and 35 minutes.

Miss Cannon started at 12:25 this morning and at 2 o'clock was two miles out. At 3:30 o'clock the storm broke, and with it came heavy seas. The experts on the boat ordered her out of the water.

Miss Cannon plans another attempt.

Ederle Will Accept All Challengers in Germany

Bispingen, Germany, Aug. 17—(AP)—Gertrude Ederle today told The Associated Press that she was prepared to take on all male and female challengers in a channel swim for a purse of $20,000 before starting for the United States.

"CRADLE OF LIBERTY" OF 1776 REBUILT AT SESQUI-CENTENNIAL

History repeats itself, but in miniature, in the tiny replica of the old Indian King Inn, erected by the State of New Jersey as one of its most interesting exhibits at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition, now in full swing in Philadelphia.

The old Tavern House, as it is sometimes called, was the Waldorf Astoria of New Jersey in 1776, and the storm center of some of that state's most momentous history, and became known as the "Cradle of Liberty."

Here, in March 18, 1777, the General Assembly met to organize the Council of Safety, a committee of twelve men, headed by Governor William Livingston, who were absolute dictators over New Jersey government during the turbulent years of the Revolutionary War.

These twelve men were a board of justice in military matters; they could commit to jail without right of bail all persons considered as public enemies, could jail any one who refused to take the oath of allegiance to the colonial government, or "disaffected parties until citizens kidnapped by the enemy were released." They even filled military vacancies and took the responsibility for feeding military prisoners.

This was the first, though not the most widely advertised, commission form of government. In the Indian King Inn were held many of the meetings of the General Assembly, which later became the state legislature, and in an upper room New Jersey—the state—was born, September 20, 1777, when the Assembly voted to substitute for the word "colony" the brand new word "state" in the newly created constitution and in all public writs and commissions.

This historic old Inn was built in 1750, and stood till 1900. It is reproduced in miniature to the last detail, even to door knocker and gutter spout, and is one of the most interesting and most commented upon exhibits at the Exposition.

It is interesting to discover that history never does quite succeed in repeating itself. The old Indian King Inn, built by hand from great, native timbers, more than 175 years ago, is reproduced today entirely by machinery. With the exception of framework shingles and details of trim, the little inn is made of celotex, a manufactured lumber made from the strong fibres of sugar cane, which not only possesses structural value, but whose insulation qualities keep the house cool in summer and warm in winter. About 2,000 feet of this modern equipment of the old hand hewn wood has been used, taking advantage of its natural soft tan color, which almost perfectly reproduces the weather tone of the original building.

Although so tiny, it is staunchly built, and New Jersey visitors at the Sesqui-Centennial are eager to have it taken back "home" after the exposition as a perpetual historical treasure

"Don Juan," screen play by Beas Meredyth, starring John Barrymore, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Don Juan's disillusioned father warns him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time. But his gay career of heart-breaking is suddenly checked in Rome by the disarming innocence of beautiful Adriana Varanes. Juan loves her madly, changing the whole philosophy of his life. The affair arouses the enmity of the infamous Borgia, for Lucretia Borgia loves Juan, and her cousin, Donati, covets Adriana.

Ah, the old times would return, and all would be well!

Another step, another—and then Juan was looking the lovely, appealing lady straight in the face—and passing on. Just striding past her, without even another glance! She looked after him, bewildered. Pedrillo would have laughed at that look of utter amazement, had he not been so thoroughly disgusted with his master in that moment.

What a way to act! With life showering its most gorgeous gifts upon a man! Most heartily Pedrillo wished that, instead of helping his master in the fight with Donato and his hirelings, he had turned and run Adriana through with his own sword.

It was on that second day that Juan's patience was rewarded. For was found making love to the pretty servant?

He stalked in the street while Juan passed through the little door in the wall surrounding the garden beside the church. Juan closed the door behind him, and it was as if the peace of the church surrounded him the moment he had done so. There was quiet in the small garden, quiet that even the violence of the Borgia's rule could not touch. There were flowers growing close to the wall; there was a little stone fountain, in whose waters cooling pigeons splashed; there was a little shrine with a statue of the Virgin, whose dull blue robes were like a bit of the blue Italian sky.

Seeing that statue, Juan murmured a prayer. The Virgin came between him and an intention the thought of which sickened him as it rose in his memory. Perhaps the Virgin would help him now, when he came to her with only purity and love in his heart. Fearful, eager, wrung by the force of his ardor, he stood waiting, and at last the heavy leather door of the church swung outward. Juan stopped behind a tall flowering shrub whose yellow flowers fell softly on his shoulders. Hardly breathing, he stood there, waiting as Adriana came out of the shadowy church and down the garden path.

At last, after days of waiting, she was coming! What would he do, what could he say to her? She walked slowly, pausing to pick a flower and to watch the pigeons. As for Adriana, she had he caught sight of Adriana for an instant, as she was entering the very church on whose steps Donati had first seen her.

There was a garden beside the church, sheltered from the street by a low wall. As the heavy doors of the church swung to behind Adriana, Juan, rousing himself from the trance of adoration into which he had fallen, hurried across the street and into the garden.

Through a side door he could see into the church; opposite that side door was an image of St. Anthony, the dull blues and reds of the saint's robes glowing faintly in the lights of the candles that burned before the image.

On the stone door knelt Adriana, with head devoutly bent. For an instant Juan knelt too, there in the soft Italian sunlight, then rose, to stare with hungry eyes at the girlish figure in the trailing white gown.

When at last she left the church he watched her as she went. Again, on the next day, and the days after that, he hurried to the church and watched for her to come, and then for her to go.

And Pedrillo, realizing that his master had completely lost his head, swore that he had lost his head as well.

It was the day following that new determination seemed to take hold of Juan. As Adriana entered the church he stood watching her adoringly—at sight of his master's face Pedrillo stared in blank unbelief. Then he shrugged his shoulders skeptically. Impossible that Don Juan, the greatest lover in all Europe, should fall so hopelessly in love!

Eagerly he hurried across the street and up the steps, and stood for an instant looking into the church, watching Adriana as she knelt in prayer.

Pedrillo followed him and would have gone with him into the church, but Juan motioned to him not to. Pedrillo stopped short, hurt and indignant. Never before had he been treated like this! Had he not always been the greatest possible help to his master? Had he not been of inestimable aid in many a delicate situation? How many times had he taken the blame that should have fallen on Don Juan in a compromising moment, just as he had done it on the balcony outside Lucretia Borgia's rooms when Juan known the bitterest despair when, regaining consciousness after fainting in Juan's arms, she realized what had happened. He had remained hidden until she was beside his hiding place; then he stepped forward humbly.

She had adored Juan, had in her mind endowed him with all the virtues that any man could have. He was brave and strong and good, who had told herself, and kind, and gentle.

And then he had shattered her idol to bits, had before her eyes become as loathsome as any slandering beast eyeing its prey. He had made her doubt all that was holy, and good, had forced her to lose her faith in mankind.

Daily she had prayed to be made to forget him. Yet even in her prayers there was the vivid memory of him, the feeling of his arms about her, of his lips pressed to hers. She told herself angrily that she would give life itself to thrust him forever out of her mind, and knew in her heart that, despite the insult he had offered her, those memories were the most precious possession that she had.

Not understanding herself, she wept. And even as she wept, she wondered if she would ever see him again.

Her question was answered when, one day, as she was entering the church, she saw him in the street. Again the next day, and again the next, she saw him, waiting in the little garden. She told herself that she must avoid such encounters; she knew that he came because he wanted to see her, that, resenting his position, she ought to give him no opportunity to speak to her.

And yet—when she longed so to speak to him again—embarrassed, humiliated when she recalled his treatment of her, she could not bring herself to make a change in her plans and going to church elsewhere. Each day she told herself that she would change the next day, and each day she postponed changing.

"I do not expect you to forgive me," he said, and his voice sounded strange in his own ears. "Just let me look at you, I beg. For three days, at this same hour, I have waited, and I would have gone on waiting through all eternity had it meant that I might have had a glimpse of you!"

About 3000 workmen are occupied in building operations at Canberra, the new federal capital of Australia. When the seat of government is transferred there, sometime in 1927, it is estimated that the population of the city will have increased from 4000 to 10,000.

There are 80 odd species of trees on the campus of the University of Wisconsin, of which 60 are native.

Toronto, the capital of Ontario, has this year increased its population more than 7000, the total now being 49,429.

The VANITY CASE

by CAROLYN WELLS

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MRS. PRENTISS sees lights mysteriously appear and disappear in the HEATH household near door one night and the next day Harbor Gardens, Long Island, is agog with the murder of MYRA HEATH and the disappearance of her husband, PERRY.

House guests of the Heaths are LAWRENCE INMAN, heir to Myra's fortune, and BUNNY MOORE, vivacious, golden-haired, to whom suspicion points because of her refusal to answer questions.

Myra Heath was peculiar. She never used cosmetics, never wore colors. She had a mania for collecting glass, and it was a rare old whisky bottle from her collection that the murderer used to kill her. Candles were burning at her head and feet and in the room was a card marked, "The Work of Perry Heath." Strange of all, she was heavily made up and garbed in gay colors.

The peculiar thing about Heath's disappearance is that all the windows and doors had been locked on the inside the night before and were found that way in the morning. Finger prints of Bunney Moore and Inman were found on the bottle.

At the Country Club the murder is discussed by SAM ANDERSON, Heath's rival for the club presidency; AL CUNNINGHAM, who is trying to solve the crime, and others. Some believe Heath the murderer. Anderson disagrees. TODHUNTER BUCK, nephew of Mrs. Prentiss and in love with Bunney, suggests to Cunningham that Heath also may have been murdered.

EMMA, a waitress in the Heath home, tells of seeing Bunney ascend the stairs about the time of the murder, carrying her vanity case. Later Bunney is amazed to get a phone call from Perry Heath advising her to keep silent.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIII

MRS. PRENTISS did not inquire and Bunney did not vouchsafe any information as to the identity of her telephone caller.

The girl went back to bed, and the older woman went to her room, but neither of them slept much. Toddy Buck, too, was wakeful, and though outwardly cheerful, there was an undercurrent of restraint and all were a little ill at ease.

The meal was nearly over, when Bunney was called to the telephone. "I won't go," she cried, petulant. "You go for me, won't you, Mr. Buck?"

"No, Miss Moore," the waitress intervened, "the gentleman on the wire says he must speak to you personally."

With a sigh, Bunney rose and went to the small booth in the hall, where the instrument was.

As she had fully expected, the voice she heard was Perry Heath's. "Don't speak," he said, "don't say a word. But, listen. You must be careful what you say or do. Emma has told a lot of stuff about you—probably lies—but she will make trouble for you if she can. I don't think she has it in for you exactly, but she loves to talk, and the detectives are getting a lot out of her."

"You'd better see her yourself, if you can, and manage to shut her mouth some way. Offer her money, if you can do it secretly. But be careful that no one knows it. And remember this, child, Inman did the deed. Inman is the criminal. If they come at you, and they will, you tell them he is the murderer of Myra. Now, remember all I've said, and don't go to pieces when they question you. You've nothing to fear—if you keep your secrets to yourself. But confide in anybody and you're lost."

"Oh, there are!" and now, Bunney's lovely mouth took on a scornful curve, her blue eyes stared haughtily.

"But—" "Hush, don't talk. The very walls have ears. No one can hear what I say to you, but they can hear what you say to me. So, don't say a word. Don't tell anyone I have talked to you, don't tell anyone the whole truth. Let them hunt for me as much as they like—they'll never find me. Goodbye, Little One, and try to forget me yourself."

The voice ceased abruptly, and the dead silence told Bunney she would hear nothing more.

She hung up the receiver, and walked slowly back to the porch, where the others still sat.

They looked at her so expectantly that she felt she must satisfy or at least allay their evident curiosity.

"It was a man I know," she said slowly. "He thinks I am in danger, and warns me to be careful. Especially, he warns me against the waitress over at the Heath house. That Emma—she thinks she is telling tales about me."

"She is," Toddy spoke out bluntly. He had concluded that he could best help Bunney by telling her all he knew, and letting her profit by it.

"They are not true," Bunney said, calmly. "Emma is making up stories."

"I heard her, last night," Buck said, not looking at her, but gazing intently at the cigaret he was lighting. "I have to admit, her statements had the ring of truth."

"Bah!" said his aunt, "you don't know truth when you hear it. Toddy hunter! You have about as much insight or intuition as a hitching post! Also, you're a gullible sort. If anybody told you the earth was flat, you'd begin to think that very likely it is."

Bunney smiled a little, but she looked at Buck seriously. "Did you really hear Emma talk?" she asked. "What did she say?"

Toddy hesitated, and then said: "I believe I'll tell you, for I think you ought to know. She declares she saw you going upstairs at half past one o'clock, the night of the murder. She says you were walking slowly, and you were carrying your vanity case—the one you have lost."

"How did Emma come to disclose this fact?" Bunney spoke coldly, her eyes almost glittered, and her whole expression was unlike her usual sunny smile.

"She said Carter told her to do it," Toddy went on, looking at her now, and trying to gather an inkling of her real thoughts.

"Carter?" Bunney gave a sudden start, and a frightened look appeared in her eyes.

In some ways, Toddy Buck had a single track mind. Just now, he was determined to find out something about Bunney's doings on the fatal night, and he took deliberate advantage of her present distraction to quiz her.

"You were downstairs, you know," he said, not accusingly, but as one stating a fact. "You saw the candles burning—"

"I—I saw those in the morning—"

Bunney began, but Toddy said, inexorably: "No; they had burned out when you entered that room in the morning. You went in with Doctor Conklin, and the candles had then gone out."

Bunney stared at him. But instead of losing her grip on herself, she seemed to be steadier, and she said, quietly: "What are you trying to do? Trick me into some incriminating statement?"

"No," Buck looked at her kindly but very seriously. "I am trying to prepare you for others who will try to trick you into such admissions. For it is better you should know that there are such—that there are people who are beginning to think you have some knowledge of Mrs. Heath's death beyond what you have told."

"Oh, there are!" and now, Bunney's lovely mouth took on a scornful curve, her blue eyes stared haughtily.

"But—" "Hush, don't talk. The very walls have ears. No one can hear what I say to you, but they can hear what you say to me. So, don't say a word. The voice ceased abruptly, and the dead silence told Bunney she would hear nothing more.

She hung up the receiver, and walked slowly back to the porch, where the others still sat.

ly and her golden, curly bob tossed with an air of utter contempt for the people of whom she had just been told.

"Will you be good enough," she said slowly, "to go to them and tell them to mind their own personal affairs?"

"But they consider this matter their own affair," Buck said, watching her. "You see, they are the detectives. That man, Mott, is just waiting a little longer for Perry Heath's return—"

"Perry Heath will never return," Bunney said, with a note of solemnity in her voice.

Mrs. Prentiss' intuition lifted its head.

"Was that Perry Heath talking to you on the telephone last night and this morning?" she demanded.

She returned her gaze. "No," she said, simply, and shook her head.

The girl's mind worked like lightning. She wanted to confide in these kind friends, and ask their advice, but Perry Heath had forbidden her to say he had spoken to her, and his word was law.

Yet she must not antagonize these people with whom she was staying. She must make them believe in her truth and innocence. She must wheedle Mrs. Prentiss into a real friendship, and she must charm young Buck, until he was blind to her faults.

Well, these things ought to be easy for her—Baby Moore, who had always, so far in her short life, charmed anyone she wished to.

But these folks were so—no, not suspicious—but so curious, yes, that was it, they were curious to know about her doings that night.

Well, they must not know, that was a sure thing! Why, her fingerprints and Larry's, too, were on that bottle, that awful bottle that had brought about the death of Myra!

And her vanity case—oh, why did they harp on that so? Did they know—oh, what did they know?

And just here, Mrs. Prentiss broke in on her thoughts again.

"What were you crying about so bitterly when Carter came to your room to tell you the sad news? Please tell us—it will be so much better for you to confide in friends. Now, if you tell us the whole story, we can understand the case better and we can be of real help to you."

"Oh, I can't—I can't—I can't," Bunney was crying now. Not sobbing, but just silently weeping, and the tears ran unheeded down her pink cheeks.

But they left not stain, for never once, since the sight of Myra and her painted face, had Bunney touched rouge or lipstick.

"Well, let me tell it, and you check me up," Toddy said.

"You went downstairs late at night to get your vanity box that you had left in the studio?"

"How did you know that?"

"All right, I know," and he nodded his head in satisfaction. "Well, then, when you went in the room, you saw—Mrs. Heath—dead—"

"Oh, no, no," and Bunney covered her eyes with her hands.

"Yes, dead—and the candles burning—"

"You're all wrong, Mr. Buck. I saw nothing of the sort. I—I didn't go down—"

"Then, when did you see those candles burning at the head and feet of Mrs. Heath?"

"I—I didn't see them at all. I almost felt as if I had seen them, because I heard them described so often—"

"Oh tut, tut! Let up on the Fairy Tales. Now, Little Miss Moore, I'm ready to help you, my good aunt, here, is ready also, but we can't do it unless you are frank and truthful with us."

"You see, my dear," Mrs. Prentiss spoke gravely, "I am certain you knew of Mrs. Heath's death before Carter told you.
